

Yet Another OSRS Post

So guess who fell back into the OSRS hole again...

My stupid ahh back at the Herblore grind

After 3 months of staying clean from this game a few bits of information pulled me back in:

1. Cease and Desist Letters for major botters
2. Blood Moon Rises Quest & Raids 4
3. 14 day memberships being 40% cheaper than when I last played

Combined with my general love for the game I've decided to log back in with the goal of making gold. Partially to have better gear but mostly to have membership without swiping.

While my guildies have told me to simply run raids or PvM content they vastly underestimate how rusty I am at the moment so in the meantime I'm going to focus on more relaxing forms of GP generation like merching. In the context of OSRS this basically means I'm playing stocks simulator without shorting and a much more whimsical set of market forces. (Looking at MoistCritikal's monkey nut collection)

Honestly this is mostly a declaration that I'm going to focus on my OSRS assets and have proper tooling to support my F2P dreams. While I have worked on small projects in the past I think it'd be pretty interesting to build a more fleshed out dashboard that not only gives me an overview of my assets but also suggestions of alternative money makers that'd help me achieve other goals on the side (like 99 skilling).